

Lamina I COOL neurons belong to a group of neurons that live in our spinal cord and help the sensors in our skin talk to our brain.

These neurons can tell the temperature down to 15° C (59° F) where they plateau, meaning they can no longer respond more to a colder temperature

But wait? What about REALLY Cold temperatures?

